

EDITOR'S NOTE

The two articles by Gordon B. Phillips in this issue are published together since, in our judgement, they are highly related. Both articles appear to have been the result of a single study undertaken with employers. The first article concentrates on attitudes of employers towards hiring deaf persons while the second report on the results of the investigation may be viewed as a reflection of attitudes in actual employment practices or statements of willingness to employ deaf persons. It was felt that the reader would benefit by having the articles in easy proximity so that any comparisons one would care to make between stated attitudes and practices would be facilitated.